Background on the Bard High School Early Colleges

Bard College (Bard) is an independent, non-profit, four-year college of the liberal arts and sciences located in Annandale, New York. Bard is chartered by the State of New York and accredited by the Middle States Commission on Higher Education to offer an Associate in Arts degree, a Bachelor of Arts degree, and various graduate degrees.

Bard has long demonstrated a commitment to supporting rigorous college programs for younger, high-school-age scholars. In 1979, Bard College assumed leadership of Simon's Rock College (now Bard College at Simon's Rock)—the first private, residential early college in the country, established to serve students after they completed the 10th grade. Early college is premised on the belief that many adolescents are ready and eager for the greater challenge, scope, and rigor of a college education while still of high school age, and that early college can help ensure these students' success in their continuing college work after the A.A. degree and their ultimate engagement as active members of civil society and leaders in their fields. Simon's Rock is accredited by the New England Association of Schools and Colleges (NEASC), Commission on Institutions of Higher Education.

At the request of the New York City Department of Education, the leadership of Bard College and Simon's Rock jointly created the first Bard High School Early College (BHSEC), which opened in 2001. This school, now located in Manhattan, NY, was one of the first public early college high schools in the nation. Due to the success of the first BHSEC, the New York City Department of Education requested that Bard College open a second BHSEC in Queens, NY, in 2008. In 2011, then-Mayor Cory Booker of Newark, NJ, invited Bard College to open a third BHSEC in Newark. Bard established a fourth BHSEC in Cleveland in partnership with the Cleveland Metropolitan School District in 2014. Bard opened BHSEC Baltimore in partnership with Baltimore City Public Schools in August of 2015.

Through a collaboration between Bard College and the host public school systems, the BHSEC schools offer their students two years of a college preparatory high school program that segues directly into a two-year college course of study. The BHSEC academic program culminates in a state high school diploma as well as 60 transferable Bard College credits and an Associate in Arts (A.A.) degree from Bard College. The BHSEC schools serve as both public high schools and accredited campuses of Bard College. The BHSEC schools in New York City are accredited as branch campuses of Bard College at Simon's Rock through NEASC. The BHSEC schools in Newark, Cleveland, and Baltimore are accredited as additional locations of Bard College through the Middle States Commission on Higher Education.

While more than 400 early colleges have been established around the country, the BHSEC schools remain unique in embedding a two-year, college degree-granting liberal arts and sciences program within a four-year, tuition-free public high school. The BHSEC schools are also among the few early college high schools in which an independent college is the academic partner.

The BHSEC schools have been remarkably successful. In the BHSEC Class of 2018 (including the students from BHSEC Manhattan, Queens, Newark, Cleveland and Baltimore), approximately 83% of graduating students earned an A.A. degree concurrently with a high school diploma, approximately 97% of students earned at least a year of transferable college credits on average, and over 85% of BHSEC graduates continued their education at four-year colleges and universities. In past classes, over 90% of BHSEC graduates have finished a bachelor's degree, many in less than four years.

Moreover, an independent, quasi-experimental study on the flagship BHSEC campuses in New York City found that BHSEC students were significantly more likely to complete bachelor's degrees than comparison students, matched by test scores, GPAs, and demographic characteristics, who attended traditional public high schools and specialized and selective public high schools, at a magnitude of 31 percentage points and 13 percentage points, respectively. Since 2003, Bard College has awarded over 3,000 A.A. degrees to BHSEC students.
Bard High School Early College Baltimore

Bard High School Early College (BHSEC) Baltimore opened in August of 2015 as a partnership between Bard College and Baltimore City Public Schools. The school is a contract school and the first early college high school in Baltimore City. The school is located at 2801 N. Dukeland Street, Baltimore, MD, 21216. The school moved to this permanent location in August of 2016.

In the 2018-19 school year, BHSEC Baltimore serves 471 students: 138 in 9th grade, 128 in 10th grade, 121 in Year 1 of the College program (in place of the traditional 11th grade), and 84 in Year 2 of the College program (in place of the traditional 12th grade). The maximum enrollment capacity at BHSEC Baltimore is 500 students. In the 2018-19 school year, BHSEC Baltimore employs 34 full-time faculty members and one adjunct faculty member. 29 members of the faculty teach in the college program, and the majority of them hold terminal degrees in their fields of study.

Curriculum Overview

In order to receive the Bard College Associate in Arts degree, students must maintain a 2.0 GPA, earn no less than 60 college credits, and fulfill the requisite distribution requirements (outlined below). Of the 60 college credits required for the A.A. degree, 45 must be earned in the sequences of classes described below. The remaining credits can be earned in classes chosen from the elective courses offered by the Science, Mathematics, Languages, Literature, Social Science, and Arts departments.

Curriculum Requirements

All four semesters of the Seminar Sequence at 3 credits each (12 credits);
Two semesters of laboratory college science at 4 credits each (8 credits);
Two semesters of college mathematics at 3 credits each (6 credits);
Two semesters of college foreign language at 4 credits each (8 credits);
Two semesters of literature and history/social science at 3 credits each (6 credits);
One semester of music, theater, dance, and/or visual art (3 credits);
Two semesters of College Experience at 1 credit each (2 credits).

See Appendix A for course descriptions for the general education requirements at BHSEC. See Appendix B for syllabi for the college courses offered at BHSEC Baltimore as of 2018-2019.

(c) Please provide a brief description of the student population to be served by the proposed new programs.

The students at BHSEC Baltimore come from across Baltimore City. In the 2018-19 academic year, the school served 471 students from across Baltimore City, 138 in the 9th grade, 128 in the 10th grade, 121 in Year 1 of the college program (in place of the traditional 11th grade), and 84 in Year 2 of the college program (in place of traditional 12th grade). Students came from approximately 50 middle and high schools and over 20 zip codes, representing the great diversity of Baltimore City. 84% of BHSEC Baltimore students are Black, 12% are White, 3% are Hispanic, and 1% are multiracial. All students receive free meals, per the school district's policy. BHSEC has already received nearly 270 applications as of January 2019 for 125 seats in the 9th grade class entering in Fall 2019.

BHSEC students are admitted through a qualitative assessment process that includes an interview and a writing assessment. The admissions process is designed to gauge students' motivation, intellectual curiosity, and interest in the early college program of study. The admissions process for the 9th grade, the primary entry point to the school, does not include a review of students' prior academic records or test scores. In keeping with the school and the school district's goals, BHSEC seeks students from a wide range of backgrounds, including students who are the first in their families to attend college and students who have not previously attended Baltimore City Public Schools.
The primary entry point to BHSEC is the 9th grade, although transfer students are considered. Any student residing in Baltimore City is eligible to apply.

2. Educational Need. Before the Commission may evaluate the readiness of an out-of-State institution to operate or award new degrees in the State, including the offering of an instructional program or a degree level not previously approved, the institution shall present evidence demonstrating the educational need to establish operations, offer programs, and award the degrees in question in the State. In addition, the out-of-State institution shall demonstrate that the proposed program, for which the institution is making application, meets a critical and compelling regional or Statewide need and is consistent with the Maryland Postsecondary Education. COMAR 13B.02.01.06A&C

INSTRUCTIONS: Please enter the requested information in the spaces provided below, or create an attachment (labeled “A-2: Educational Need”) to this application and respond to the following questions for each new program:

(a) What critical and compelling Regional or Statewide (Maryland) need and demand do your proposed programs meet? In responding to this question provide documentation as indicated below:

1. If the programs serve occupational needs, present data projecting market demand and the availability of openings in the job market to be served by the new programs for which the institution is making application. This information may include workforce and employment projections prepared by the federal and State governments, the availability of graduates in the State or region, marketing studies done by the institution or others, and material from professional and trade associations.

BHSEC Baltimore fulfills a regional and statewide need to increase the number of students who graduate with a postsecondary degree. According to the Maryland Department of Labor's 2008-2018 occupational projections, 77% of anticipated job openings in Maryland will require postsecondary training or education beyond high school. Currently, college completion rates are not sufficient to meet the needs of the workforce. According to Complete College America, of the students who matriculate to college in Maryland, 63.1% of students entering an associate's degree program require remedial education, and only 12.7% of full-time students earn an Associate's degree in three years. Only 63.5% of students at non-flagship four-year Institutions of Higher Education earn a degree in six years.

In Baltimore, the need for higher college completion is even greater. On average, in Baltimore, about 56% of recent graduating students have enrolled in college immediately after high school graduation. Approximately 44% of Baltimore City Public School graduates who first enrolled in a four-year college completed a bachelor's degree, and 5-6% of graduates who first enrolled in a two-year college completed a college degree. (Baltimore Education Research Consortium, Baltimore City Schools, College Fact Book, January 2017).

By allowing public high school students to complete up to two years of transferable college credit and an associate's degree, free of charge and within the four years of traditional high school, BHSEC Baltimore helps students access college, avoid remedial education, and complete college degrees, both associate's and bachelor's degrees, on time or early. By helping students complete college degrees, BHSEC Baltimore fulfills a key regional and statewide workforce preparation need.

(2) If the programs serve societal needs (include the traditional liberal arts education), provide a Description of how the proposed programs will enhance higher education in Maryland and contribute society

BHSEC Baltimore fills an important societal need to increase college access, affordability, and completion for Baltimore City students.

College Access
BHSEC Baltimore increases college access for Baltimore City students in a few key ways. For one, the school provides high-school-age students with a two-year, degree-granting college course of study free of charge. This opportunity for tuition-free college study during the four years of traditional high school provides significant college access to high-school-age students. BHSEC also substantially increases the number of dual enrollment opportunities in Baltimore City. In 2014, only 55 Baltimore City Public Schools high school students (out of a population of approximately 22,882) were also enrolled in college courses. (Baltimore Education Research Consortium, College Enrollment and Degree Completion in Baltimore City Schools, 2013.) Data demonstrates that dual enrollment - and early college in particular - significantly improves students' likelihood of enrolling in and completing a college degree. For example, a 2014 experimental study conducted by the American Institutes for Research found that early college students are 9 percent more likely to enroll in college and 20 percent more likely to complete college degrees than comparison peers who did not attend an early college. (American Institutes for Research, Early College, Continued Success: Early College High School Initiative Impact Study, January 2014.)

In addition, BHSEC's college counseling program, the College Transfer Office, helps students identify strong four-year college matches, prepare competitive applications, and transfer their college credits. Thus, BHSEC increases students' access to college after graduation as well as during the early college program itself. BHSEC students in the first graduating class, the Class of 2017, were accepted to nearly 50 different four-year IHEs, including four-year public and independent colleges and universities in and out of state. The Class of 2018, a small transfer class of 13 graduating students, garnered 58 college acceptances between them. Bard also has four formal articulation agreements in place for its early college high schools with Maryland colleges: Bowie State University, Goucher College, McDaniel College, and Mount St. Mary's University. Bard is working to develop more articulation agreements with independent and public colleges in Maryland. The existing agreements are included as Appendix C, and the list of four-year colleges that accepted students in the BHSEC Baltimore Class of 2017 and 2018 is included as Appendix D.

College Affordability
In addition to inadequate college preparation and access, the cost of college is another reason students do not complete college degrees. By allowing students to earn up to 60 college credits and an associate's degree free of charge, BHSEC Baltimore allows students to save a significant amount in tuition and fees in pursuit of their college degrees. For BHSEC students transferring 60 college credits to a four-year public IHE in Maryland, the savings in tuition and fees will likely be above $20,000, in addition to the added benefit of no debt burden for the first two years of college. (University of Maryland, Office of the Bursar, Undergraduate Tuition, Fees, and Other Expenses). These cost savings will further increase students' chances of completing a bachelor's degree. BHSEC students also are competitive for scholarships. Students in the BHSEC Baltimore Class of 2017 (44 graduating students in total) received approximately $1.9 million in scholarships while the Class of 2018 (13 graduating students in total) received approximately $1.6 million in scholarships to four-year IHEs.

College Completion
Possessing a postsecondary degree increases lifelong earnings and reduces the risk of unemployment. (Census Bureau, Educational Attainment in the U.S.: 2009, 2012.) Median earnings of residents possessing a bachelor's degree are 77% higher than those of residents with only a high school diploma. (Ibid.)

The need for higher college completion is particularly strong in Baltimore. As previously stated, approximately 5-6% of Baltimore City Public Schools graduates who first enrolled in a two-year college finished any type of degree, and approximately 44% of those who started in a four-year college completed bachelor's degrees.

Because of BHSEC's supportive and rigorous early college program, BHSEC students complete college degrees at high rates. In the BHSEC Baltimore Class of 2017, 71% of eligible students (who began the college program in Fall 2015) earned the Bard College Associate's degree and 60 transferable college credits, and 92% of the graduating class earned a high school diploma and at least one year of transferable college credits on average. Of the small transfer class of 2018, 83% graduated with their high school diploma and an average of 48 college credits, and 48% obtained the A.A. degree. Approximately 85% of BHSEC Baltimore graduates were accepted to four-year colleges and universities.

Thus, BHSEC Baltimore fills an important societal need to increase college access, affordability, and completion among Baltimore City students. Furthermore, BHSEC students are prepared by their rigorous liberal-arts-based early college training to succeed not only in four-year colleges, but also in a wide range of careers, including medicine, law, business, and academia, and to become engaged citizens and leaders in their fields. The preparation for professional and civic life from the BHSEC education provides an added societal benefit for the city and state.

(b) If similar programs exist in the State, what are the similarities or differences in your program in terms of the degrees to be awarded, the areas of specialization, and the specific academic content of the programs?

BHSEC Baltimore is the only degree-granting early college high school in Baltimore City and the only liberal arts-based, degree-granting early college high school in Maryland that has a nonprofit independent college as the higher education partner. The closest school model to BHSEC is the Academy of Health Sciences at Prince George's Community College, an early college high school focused on health sciences that partners with the Prince George's Community College. Baltimore County Community College opened an early college high school in partnership with a local high school in Fall 2018. The State of Maryland also has P-TECH programs (partnerships between public high schools, community colleges, and industry partners) that have a different model and approach but similarly offer a tuition-free associate's degree to students who begin college courses at a younger age. Bard is supportive of policies that allow for the expansion of high-quality early college opportunities for students.

(c) Is a Maryland employer sponsoring/supporting the application for the program(s) to be offered at this location?

☐ Yes ☒ No

If yes, please attach a letter of support from the employer addressed to the Assistant Secretary, Planning and Academic Affairs. The letter should outline the employer’s reasons for selecting the institution and its programs and state the benefits to the employees who participate in the program.

3. Administrative Staff. The out-of-State institution shall provide for an on-site administrative staff responsible for overall administrative operation of educational activities including counseling, advising, testing orientation, financial aid services, and maintenance of academic records. In addition to being responsible for the administration of the policies and procedures of the parent institution, the designated administrators are responsible for meeting the expectations set forth in this chapter [of the Regulatory Standards of the State of Maryland for Out-of-State Institutions]. The duties and size of the staff shall be adequate for the size of the educational activities offered. COMAR 13B.02.01.15

INSTRUCTIONS: Has any previously reported Administrative Staff information changed since your last approval at this location? ☒ Yes ☐ No

If yes, please enter the requested information in the spaces provided below, or create an attachment labeled (labeled “A-3: Administrative Staff Changes”) to this application with any changes to the following questions:

In the 2018-19 school year, BHSEC Baltimore is led by a Principal (Dr. Francesca Gamber), Dean of Studies (Matthew Croson), Assistant Dean of Studies (David Guba), and an Assistant Dean of Students (Melvin Bond).

The Principal is the leader of the school, ultimately accountable to Bard College and its Board of Trustees for the academic performance and financial management of the campus. The Principal oversees hiring, curriculum development, budgeting, and operations and is responsible for ensuring that the school is an accountable, reliable partner to Bard College and Baltimore City Public Schools. The Principal manages the administrative team and the leaders of departments, such as admissions and college transfer services. The Dean of Studies works directly with faculty, helping with curriculum development, course sequencing, scheduling, and providing instructional feedback and support. The Dean of Studies also liaises with the Bard College Office of the Registrar regarding students' transcripts. In addition, a faculty committee at Bard, the Early College Faculty Exchange and Oversight Committee, reviews syllabi, course proposals, and faculty CVs for all of the early colleges, including BHSEC Baltimore. The Dean of the Early Colleges, who works closely with the Faculty Exchange and Oversight Committee and Bard's senior academic leadership, provides guidance, support, and coaching to the BHSEC leadership teams.

In addition to the Principal and Deans, BHSEC employs support staff, including guidance counselors, a College Transfer Officer, Student Support Specialists, and Program Assistant, among others, who offer students socio-emotional support and counseling, academic tutoring and guidance, and college advising services. Faculty also serve as advisors to students. There is no Financial Aid Officer at BHSEC, as no tuition is charged to students at the school.

These shall realistically reflect the stated objectives, purposes, and philosophy of the out-of-State institution. Further, an out-of-State institution shall ensure that all students have access to a well-developed program of counseling, testing, advisement, orientation, financial aid, career development, and placement. The institution may determine the specific organization of services, as well as the resources and staffing provided, as long as provision for these services are made. Student activities that complement the instructional program are particularly encouraged. COMAR Section 1.18 also requires that the out-of-State institutions keep complete and accurate records of admission, enrollment, grades, scholarships, transfer of credits, transcripts, graduates, and other essentials in accordance with standard practice. This includes the physical security and confidentiality of such records. The Section requires as well, a published statement of student rights, privileges, and responsibilities and the school’s adherence to its student grievance procedures.

Coursework will be informed by lectures that detail historical aspects of figurative drawing/painting as well as contemporary practices in the genre. Students will work in a variety of media including charcoal, graphite, watercolor, ink, acrylic, and collage. As artists have done throughout the course of history, students will utilize their knowledge of the figure to create works of art that reflect their unique view of the world, fueled by their personal experiences.

Confronting Empire: The West and the World
Professor David Guba

This course examines the origins, dynamics, and repercussions of “new” imperialism in modern world history. Starting in the mid-to-late 19th century, imperial nation-states across the globe scrambled to acquire and control as much overseas territory as possible, and largely in the undeveloped but resource-rich areas of Latin America, Africa, and Asia. Though dominant societies in Europe, the Americas, and Asia had pursued empire-building for centuries, the economic, political, intellectual, technological, and cultural transformations of the 19th century produced an unprecedented fervor for imperial expansion that worked to shape the rocky landscape of 20th century world history as well as the world we live in today. In the first units of the course, we will examine the origins and dynamics of “new” imperialism. Why did most powerful states—whether republics or monarchies, dictatorships or communes—engage in the project of new imperialism in the late 19th and early 20th centuries? What drove this unprecedented and global conquest of territory? What impact did this new phase of imperialism have on both colonizers and the colonized? And what enabled and facilitated this conquest? Our readings and class meetings during the first unit will work to answer and complicate these and related questions.

Constitutional Law
Professor Saul Cohen

This is a semester long Constitutional Law course which explored and examines the workings of the U.S. Constitution. The Constitution is the basic law of the land, the foundational document that establishes the structure of our government and grants us our individual rights. We will use an integrative approach to examine how doctrines have changed over time, how the document is and has been interpreted, and through the use of case studies of Supreme Court cases examine how the Court resolves disputes. We will use the same methods as used in law schools i.e. legal thinking, writing, discussion, and argumentation.

Elections and the Electoral Process
Professor Andrew McKelvy

The objective of Elections and the Electoral Process is primarily two-fold: to introduce you to how elections are conducted and to give you regular opportunities to think through issues and controversies surrounding elections and democracy. As we move through the course, we will consider both current events and historical developments, electoral processes employed both inside and outside the United States, and a number of arguments for and against both present practices and proposed reforms.
You will be reading from a variety of sources (such as opinion articles, scholarly publications, Supreme Court decisions) and drawing on them—or flatly opposing them—to stake out your own position on the questions they address. You will also get hands-on, practical experience by taking part in conducting an election on campus and by observing this November’s election as it happens. By the end of the semester, you will have a better understanding of how elections work and (I hope) a greater interest in elections and the role they play in the life of a democratic society.

Gender Trouble
Professor Emily Hayman

What is “gender trouble”? This provocative question was posed by the philosopher and gender theorist Judith Butler in 1990, and it continues to echo with meaning today. In fact, it seems to refract into multiple questions, including: What is the trouble with gender? Do we – or specific individuals – experience trouble with “gender” as society defines it? How do societal concepts of gender cause us trouble? How do we trouble those societal concepts to better serve or describe ourselves as individuals?

These are just a few of the questions that we will explore in this course through an array of literary and theoretical texts that touch upon the concepts of gender, sex, and sexuality. Students will be asked to be close and insightful readers and to approach their reading with an open mind and an interest in “troubling” their own preconceptions of gender.

Introduction to Philosophy
Professor Benjamin Craig

Philosophy is that discipline within the academy reserved for asking the Big Questions: “Does God exist?” “What is the right thing to do?” “What is the best life?” “What is the nature of the soul?” “What is the meaning of life?” They are considered the Big Questions because these are the questions that humanity has organized itself around. One of the things that makes us human is that we seem to be the only species that considers questions like these. In a profound way, these questions make us human. And, as it will be argued throughout the course, considering these questions can lead to a fuller, richer, and more intentional life. At the heart of the liberal arts, of which philosophy is king, is the pledge that if you undertake this endeavor, then you will come out the other side able to lead a freer life.

Your primary aim in this course should be to explore how to live “an examined life,” in which you question what seems obvious about life, often finding that it isn’t obvious, after all. Your second aim should be to improve your skills at critical reading and writing. Your third aim is to enjoy some great works of literature and philosophy. Please note that although the course should help you to reflect on your own life, it will do so by honing your skills at interpreting and assessing works by great authors, ancient and modern. Lectures, discussions, and written assignments will be devoted to critical thinking about the texts.

Theories of Social Justice and Civic Engagement (Contemporary World Affairs)
Professor Patrick Oray

How do we best address social injustice? How do we empower ourselves as citizens to protect ourselves and our communities against inequity? What strategies can we employ to effect meaningful social change? Civic engagement is an act of problem solving. As such, we will use moments in the long history of social justice movements in the U.S. and abroad to uncover the most thoughtful and impactful theories and practices for social action. Along the way, we will read, learn about, and discuss what strategies and processes we can use to effect social change in the communities in which we live.

Year 1 Seminar
Professors Vicki Barnett-Woods, Daniel Gilman, and Patrick Oray

This course is intended as a first-year college survey course, drawing upon both a wide range of readings and a wide range of ideas. The primary task of this course is to introduce students to major philosophical and ethical questions that drive a huge amount of literature, as well as many other aspects of societies current and past. Students will engage with some of the events, intellectuals, and ideas that have helped shape Western civilization, along with the influential ideologies and values documented in its “great books”. But instead of simply celebrating Western culture’s greatest hits, our efforts in this year-long seminar course will focus on interrogating and critiquing the major trends in Western philosophical, religious, economic, and scientific thought.

Year 2 Seminar
Professors Matthew Flaherty and Emily Hayman

The general theme of the Seminar course sequence is to delve into the question of what it means to be human. In the first section of the sequence, you explored what it means to be a good citizen and to live a good life. In this second section, we’ll consider whether moral and cultural development is worth the price we pay for it. We’ll explore many hard questions that come along with civilization and modernity. As our democracy continues to be threatened by tribalistic prejudice and misinformation, American citizens have a responsibility to develop habits of charitable and informed discussion. Every person deserves the opportunity to reflect on the values that inform their lives through dialogue with great works of literature.

China has witnessed dramatic economic and cultural changes in the past four decades. The Chinese contemporary art scene has naturally reflected these changes, undergoing its own distinct transformations since the late 1980s. This course will offer students the opportunity to journey through forty years of contemporary Chinese art history by “visiting” the most influential Chinese artists, including several Chinese-American artists whose careers began in China. Through the lenses of each artist’s works, we will analyze China’s contemporary history, culture, society, economic disparity, consumerism, and modernization. Class readings will be selected from exhibition catalogues, artists interviews, newspapers, critic reviews, and magazine articles.

Honors Chinese I
Professor Yu-San Lai

This is an introductory course aiming to explore the language and culture. The language part will essentially focus on colloquial Mandarin, stressing on communicating skills in daily settings. Chinese culture will be introduced throughout the course, both in Mandarin and in English. Supplementary materials such as songs, poems, tongue twisters, jokes, and movies might be added throughout the semester as a means to introduce Chinese culture to help form an international perspective and become world citizens.
Latin American Short Fiction: Beyond the Boom
Professor Laura Quijano

In this course we will analyze short fictional narratives from both well- and lesser-known Latin American authors in order to situate and understand the texts in their socio-historical contexts. Students will read a variety of short fiction published from the early 20th century to the present, including some Latinx authors. The primary texts will be supplemented with essays on the form and function of the short story as well as a few films based on the work of the authors we will be studying.

Introduction to Architecture and Architectural History
Professor Matt Croson

This course will introduce students to the historical evolution of architecture, both abroad and close to home. Students will learn how to use an architect's rule to interpret scale on scaled drawings; identify and discuss how our built environment is both an artifact and a vector in our shared history; describe how computer model and physical models are used to express architectural concepts; and identify the work of iconic architects. In this course, students will work on their own architectural drafts and build scale models based around scenarios and conflicts surrounding the creation of houses and cities.

Technology Foundations
Professor Matthew Tobias Woodle

Technology Foundations is a practical skill based course that aims to build Technology Literacy through the creation of Digital Media. As a part of an integrated approach to using technology in contemporary professional environments, the focus of this course will be on working through Iterative cycles of Planning, Production, and Presentation. In this course students will learn these Development Processes in parallel with Rapid Visualization techniques as part of a skills based approach to develop their Technological Literacy.
College Biology I
Professor Richard Kurker

A reintroduction to the concepts of biology in which students will identify key concepts in biology and relate them to contemporary scientific and ethical issues. Students will read and critique scientific literature with an understanding; design experiments, collect data, and interpret and present results; explain the chemical basis and origins of life on Earth; distinguish among cell types and understand the processes that take place within them; understand genes and genetic inheritance; discuss ecology and interactions within ecosystems; and explain how the theory of evolution supports the diversity of life on Earth.

Environmental Science
Professor Victoria Klima-Blanchard

The goal of the Environmental Science course is to provide students with the scientific principles, concepts, and methodologies required to understand the interrelationships of the natural world, to identify and analyze environmental problems both natural and human-made, to evaluate the relative risks associated with these problems, and to examine alternative solutions for resolving and/or preventing them.

Forensic Science
Professor Richard Kurker

An introduction to the science and technology used by forensic scientists. In this course students will describe the historical context of forensic science and its basic applicability to criminal law; distinguish among various types of evidence and evaluate a crime scene; describe how fingerprints, hair, fibers, soil, glass, blood and DNA can be used to draw conclusions from a crime scene; explain the significance of toxicology and the chemical analysis of drugs, poisons, and trace evidence; understand how conclusions can be drawn from forensic entomology and human remains; use firearm/fire/explosion remnants, toolmarks, and impressions in forensic analysis; identify forgeries in handwriting and documents; and perform and design forensic science experiments, collect data, and analyze results.

General Chemistry I
Professor Victoria Bampoh

This course is a one-semester chemistry course that will build on the fundamentals of General Chemistry. A review of foundational topics such as atomic structure, molecular structure, properties of molecules and chemical bond formation will precede the course. The concepts introduced in this course will include behavior of gases, energy changes, theory of light, solutions, acid-base and nuclear reactions. Throughout the course, a heavy emphasis is placed on group activities and individual problem solving skills as well as laboratory-based investigations of important phenomena.

Marine Science
Professor Victoria Klima-Blanchard

When you look at a globe, you can see that nearly three quarters of the Earth's surface is covered with water and it contains an incredible diversity of microbial, algal, and animal life forms. In this course, you will learn about life in the ocean depths, at the Polar extremes, in coral reefs, estuaries, and in the open sea. You will learn about plants large and small, marine birds, reptiles, invertebrates and fish. You will learn how all these organisms connect with each other in the marine biome, and what threats are facing these ecosystems.
